HUD FHA Marks 50th Anniversary

June 27, 1934, was a brighter day than most during those grim times of the Great Depression. On that day, the National Housing Act was signed, creating the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) for the multiple purpose of rescuing the nation's homebuilding industry, reforming mortgage lending practices, broadening opportunities for homeownership, and raising housing standards.

FHA has undergone many changes in 50 years. Most importantly, it was made a part of the Cabinet-level U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in 1965, but the basic purpose of insuring residential mortgages is unchanged, according to HUD Regional Administrator-Regional Housing Commissioner William Y. Nishimura.

"FHA continues to be a stabilizing influence on the country's homebuilding and mortgage lending industry," says Nishimura. "And, most important, FHA insurance is still one of the best means of fostering homeownership for younger Americans."

In its fifty years of operation, HUD-FHA has insured mortgages on more than 14 million dwelling units nationwide, with a total insured value exceeding $248 billion. Comparable figures for HUD's Region X offices are: Alaska, 16,845 units at $563 million; Idaho, 70,165 units at $1.243 billion; Oregon, 183,176 units at $2.584 billion; Eastern Washington (Spokane Office), 91,850 units at $1.522 billion; and Western Washington (Seattle Office), 415,191 units at $6.511 billion.

The Seattle Office of FHA opened its doors in January of 1935. The first new construction loan insured by FHA was a brick residence in the 2500 block of Crestmont Place West, Magnolia. Seattle Trust provided a $7,200 loan on the $10,000 home. Then-Seattle Mayor Charles L. Smith, FHA Director Clark R. Jackson, and Seattle Trust officers, R.F. Taylor and Kenelm Winslow, were among the dignitaries commemorating completion on March 5, 1984.

Political Asylum Rejected

On June 25, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that it would not hear Hector Marroquin's plea for political asylum, dealing a blow to thousands of refugees seeking political asylum in the United States.

Marroquin fled to this country in 1974 because he feared persecution in Mexico for his political activities as a student in support of democratic and trade union rights.

In 1977 Marroquin asked for political asylum, but the Immigration and naturalization Service (INS) ordered him deported to Mexico, in spite of the overwhelming evidence that Marroquin presented showing that his life would be in danger if forced to return there. For nearly seven years Marroquin has fought against deportation, taking his case for asylum all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

In spite of the recent Supreme Court ruling, Marroquin vowed to continue his fight to remain in the U.S. He applied for a permanent residence visa -- or a green card as it is more commonly known -- in June 1983 based on his marriage to a U.S. citizen. His wife, Priscilla Schenk, is a garment worker and a member of the Amalgamated Textile & Clothing Workers Union.

Applications such as Marroquin's are routine granted, but the INS has stalled on his because of his political beliefs. In the past the INS's stated position was that they were not going to act on Marroquin's application until after the Supreme Court ruled. In the Supreme Court ruled against him, the INS would then be able to deport him before having to act on his green card application.

Marroquin's case has won broad support from the labor movement, including the National Education Association and the Canadian Labour Congress, the equivalent of the AFL-CIO; the Black movement, including Operation PUSH and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference; as well as organizations and leaders in the Latino and Women's movements. Twenty seven members of the U.S. Congress have also supported his fight.

The Political Rights Defense Fund, which is coordinating Marroquin's defense, is asking that messages demanding that he be allowed to remain in the U.S. be sent to Commissioner Alan Nelson, INS, Washington, D.C. 20536

George R. Lewis

George R. Lewis was elected Vice President and Treasurer of Philip Morris Incorporated at a meeting of the Board of Directors held today. Mr. Lewis had served as Vice President, Finance, of the Seven-Up Company, one of the six Philip Morris operating companies since October 1982.

Women - Nomination

Mondale is being urged to select a woman as a running mate. After Mondale was introduced to the National Education Association by its president, Mary Hatwood Futrell, Mondale joked and said, "it's a great pleasure to be introduced by the next Vice-president of the United States." Mondale might have been joking, but many of the 7,018 teachers on the convention floor are hoping he is serious. "Mondale-Futrell" buttons have blossomed on many convention lapels in the past two days.

Futrell, 44, received her teaching degree from Virginia State College, also a Master's from George Washington University.

Although Futrell is a very good contingent, leaders of the National Educational Association are telling Mondale to resist the pressure to select a female as a running mate.

Mondale running mate selection process is being called a "sham" designed to keep black Americans quiet until after the Democratic Convention, by a group of Black Republicians at the NAACP's Annual Meeting in Kansas City.

Mondale will address the NAACP, July 3, as well as the Rev. Jessie Jackson.

HAVE YOU BELIEVE OUR REPORT?
SERIES #45
ISAIAH 53: 1&2

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a root out of dry ground.

He hath no form nor comiliness: and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

WORDS OF WISDOM
JEREMIAH 15: 1-

Then said the Lord unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth. And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the Lord; Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine, and such as are for the captivity to the captivity. And I will appoint over them four kinds, saith the Lord: the sword to slay,and the dogs to tear, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the earth, to devour and destroy. And I will cause them to be removed into all kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh the son of Hezekiah king of Judah, for that which he did in Jerusalem. For who shall have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem? or who shall bemoan thee? or who shall go aside to ask how thou doest? Thou hast forsaken me, saith the Lord, thou art gone backward: therefore will I stretch out my hand against thee, and destroy thee; I am weary with repenting. And I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land I will bereave them of children will destroy my people, since they return not from their ways. Their widows are increased to me above the sand of the seas: I have brought upon them against the mother of the young men a spoiler at noonday: I have caused him to fall upon it suddenly, and terrors upon the city. She that hath borne seven languisheth: she hath given up the ghost; her sun is gone down while it was yet day: she hath been ashamed and confounded: and the residue of them will I deliver to the sword before their enemies, saith the Lord. Woe is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me a man of strife and a man of contention to the whole earth! I have neither lent on usury, nor men have lent to me on usury; yet every one of them doth curse me.

The Lord said, Verily it shall be well with thy remnatn; verily I will cause the enemy to entreat thee well in the time of evil and in the time of affliction.

The Importance Of Your Paycheck

Paychecks are important because they put a price tag on the work you do, and it is this price tag which helps to value not just your work but where you rank among your fellow workers in the same vocational field or in the same line of work.

The paycheck involves more than money because the paycheck carries enormous psychological meanings and messages besides the more obvious economic considerations.

A cut in our paycheck hurts. We may feel the loss of the financial income when our paycheck is reduced and we suffer some financial pinch. More important than this economic loss is the psychological pain we feel and suffer. A smaller paycheck means that the value of our work has been diminished. To devalue our work suggests a deflation of our own personal self-esteem as well because our essential identify is wrapped up so closely with our occupation and our daily work.

Paychecks are important not just because of the money they represent but because of the additional psychological meanings and messages which the paycheck communicates to us, to our family, to our friends to our fellow workers, and to society in general.

Our compensation must include more than economic consideration if we are to be fully satisfied as persons.

This explains why there are so many thousands upon thousands of volunteer workers in America. These people give themselves unstintingly to many good causes and never get a dime for their services. But these volunteer workers are not unpaid. They feel themselves well paid because the service they render is valued by those who receive it and is rewarded with public recognition with personal self-satisfac - tion... These volunteer workers feel well paid when they see someone in fresh touch with God, when they see lives profoundly changed and when they see institutions of fear dismatled and possibilities of faith increased. They feel deeply compensated when they sense themselves caught up in something bigger then themselves.

Because our psychological paychecks are important to us, there are some things that people will do and some sacrifices they will make without money and without price. And there are somethings that people won't do for money alone.

Isn't it amazing how the Bible so often anticipates the emphases and finding of psychological discovery of philosophical truth?

Corporate worship is one way to keep our own lives aglow. If we neglect worship and attempt to live our lives alone or in a vacuum, the fire of our faith is soon extinguished. From the psalmist comes a cry, "As the hart panteth after the waterbrooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God." This consuming desire of the spirit is why we are here in church today. We just have to have God. We need a word from God's Book and the overture of love from Jesus Christ which reaches through to us in God's house. We want and need to have our souls flooded with the love of God in Christ.

Trigere's Fall Fashion

This week in our paper, our fashion consultant views fashions by Pauline Trigere and Lucie Porges.

Fall brings out the best in Trigere and Porges. This fall, there are stronger and more varied colors to be found, and this is particularly true in the cocktail group, which includes printed charmeuse, a rainbow of silk jacquards, chiffons with lame, velvet and satin. Colored fox and opossum lend their glamour to some of the pieces, while other quieter dresses are a foil for Pauline's newest jewelry.

For day, soft angel hair jersey (cashmere and silk), wool challis, and Trigeen (a fine wool crepe) are masterfully done in a wide range of silhouettes.

Trim chemises have full sleeves with inverted pleats which taper to a tight cuff. Gentle printed challis floats are shown with matching giant scarves. Large scarves are also cut into blouses, which are then paired with skirts of Trigeen or Facile. Dresses are tucked, pleated, and strongly detailed to take their place among the classic examples that are by now expected in each Trigere collection.

And all the glamour can be concealed under the simplest and thus most quietly dramatic of black broadcloth capes.

Golden Clovers on black Chiffon highlight this beautiful cocktail dress with soft cinch belt, gently tucked skirt and cuffed sleeves.

Bronze and black jewelled collar and cuffs highlight the black silk charmeuse dress which can be worn blouson as a short cocktail dress or unbelted as a dinner length float.

"Optical Illusion" is what you can say about this red and black panel print silk. The effect creates a very dramatic entrance.

"It's not a youth orchestra," says conductor Adey. "Either it's an orchestra or it isn't. It has to work as a professional orchestra or it doesn't work at all."

This conducting philosophy combined with fine musicianship led to the Nottinghamshire Orchestra's selection to represent all England at the prestigious conference of the International Society for Music Education this summer in Oregon -- with added tours to the United States and Canada.

Besides leading the Nottinghamshire County Orchestra, Christopher Adey is associate conductor of the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra and has conducted regularly with major ensembles in Germany, France, Spain and North America.

PSALM 41:1-9

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble.

The Lord will preserve him, and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth: and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies.

The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing: thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness.

I said, Lord, be merciful unto me: heal my soul: for I have sinned against thee.

Mine enemies speak evil of me, when shall he die, and his name perish?

And if he come to see me, he speaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itself; when he goeth abroad, he telleth it.

All that hate me whisper together against me: against me do they divise my hurt. An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth he shall rise up no more.

Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me.

We welcome news of your church and civic events.

"Bonanza" Winners

That elusive 'O' in the Wasnington State Lottery's "Bonanza" instant game is still out there--at least 15 of them-six weeks after the game began.

Lottery Director, Robert A. Boyd, said today that 15 of the 23 tickets containing the letter 'O' have yet to be redeemed. A $50,000 prize awaits the person who collects each of the letters in the word "Bonanza" and forwards the tickets to Lottery Headquarters in Olympia.

While there are still opportunities for winning the game's largest prize, excluding the $1,000-per-week-for-life prize awarded at the grand prize drawing, there have been more than 15,000 winning tickets redeemed since the game began, May 6. Of the tickets redeemed, more than 11,000 have for $25 cash prizes and 3,521 have been redeemed for $50 each. More than 31,000 winning tickets, worth an estimated $2.6 million, are still available.

Light Division's Stadium Station

Rebuilding of the Light Division's Stadium Substation is continuing this summer in preparation for installation of new, equipment of increased capacity.

Superintendent James E. Thompson said a contractor began working at the site this week installing the underground duct lines that provide improved electrical cable access to the substation. Thompson said this phase of the work will involve some temporary road blocks around the substation site at North 2nd and I streets. Construction is expected to last through August.

He said the contractor and the Light Division will do everything possible to minimize any inconvenience and requested resident's patience during the period.

Thompson said the construction at the substation and conversion of nearby power lines from 4,000 to 12,500 volts will allow the Light Division to reduce the total number of substations necessary to handle the power loads.

Court's OK's Last Hired First Fired

Black workers have traditionally been last hired, first fired. That discriminatory practice was somewhat modified by affirmative action plans and especially by court-ordered remedies mandating retention of newly hired blacks during layoffs, seniority provisions not withstanding.

Now the Supreme Court has reversed that and delivered a blow to black aspirations in a decision that upholds the supremacy of the seniority system over the claims of affirmative action.

The Court overturned a lower court ruling that said layoffs in Memphis' fire department had to protect jobs of newly hired blacks.

The lower court had ordered a hiring plan designed to redress past discrimination in the department's hiring practices.

Two rights were in conflict -- seniority and affirmative action. The Court could have dismissed the case since the issues were dead -- the fired workers were rehired long ago.

But it didn't. It took the case as an excuse to move toward a redefinition of permissible affirmative action programs. And in so doing it reopens an issue we thought had been resolved by earlier decisions.

That's the real danger of this case -- that it could signal a new, more restrictive approach to affirmative action that could severely impede the desegregation of the workplace.

The seniority issue itself is not an overwhelming roadblock to black gains in employment. Few affirmative action plans will be materially altered by establishing seniority plans as legally binding. Even so, both white and black workers would be better served by adopting work-sharing plans or other means of sharing the pain of layoffs.

The real trouble with the decision lies in its broad reach, and in the reasoning of the Court's majority that indicates it believes race conscious remedies to racial discrimination must give way to remedies for individuals who can prove they've been discriminated against

If that reasoning carries over to other affirmative action cases then we are in for a return to the days of rampant discrimination.

Blacks haven't been discriminated against because of individual attributes but because of race. And any attempt to avoid that fact in framing remedies just encourages continued discrimination.

The danger of the Court's unnecesarily broad decision is that it may encourage some employers and governments to abandon efforts to integrate their work force.

The Wall Street Journal quoted the head of one company as saying: "Yeah, I think the pressure is off on affirmative action."

Fortunately, it also quoted others as saying that their affirmative action plans had been in place for years and were not about to change now. But the decision has to have an effect on the many employers who want to see the government out of the business of protecting people from discrimination, and who don't mind a return to the days when they could discriminate at will.

Another danger -- and it is a real one -- is that the Justice Department may go back into its files to reopen affirmative action cases that were thought settled. The Court decision is a clear break with earlier decisions that set the boundaries for affirmative actior plans and endorsed those that met its tests.

Now the entire issue may be reopened. Not only must civil rights advocates face refighting old battles, but those battles must now be fought before a Court that barely disguised its hostility to affirmative action as a principle.

By upholding the last hired, first fired doctrine the Supreme Court abdicated its responsibility as a protector of minority rights.

8 Warning Signals

Do you suffer from headaches, stiffness of neck, pain between the shoulders, backache, pain in the arms or legs, numbness in hands or feet, or nervousness? These are 8 danger signals which indicate something is wrong and usually show that the sufferer needs to see a doctor of Chiropractic. Persistent headaches may be a warning signal of pinched nerves at the base of the head which would develop into a more serious condition.

Nervousness, from which everyone suffers at one time or another, is also a warning. Its persistence is a definite signal that something isn't right. Your chiropractor is trained to track down this unpleasant visitor and cut his unwelcomed visit as short as possible.

Stiffness of the neck is a sure indiction that the normal flow of nerve energy, vital to good health, has been interrupted. Again, your chiropractor is trained to make the necessary corrections and allow the flow of nerve energy to return to normal.

The other warning signals - pain between the shoulders, painful joints, pain in arm or leg, numbness in hands or feet, and backaches are all things which your doctor of Chiropractic is especially trained to help. He is often referred to as a specialist in these areas because he knows the spine the way a concert pianist knows the keyboard and he recognizes the important part it plays in health. Through the spine's flexible column of small, moveable bones called vertebrae, nerves connect your brain to every organ, tissue, and cell in your body.

If you suffer from one or more of these 8 danger signals, you shouldn't just ignore them.

Guest Editorial

Nearly a million young people, mostly Black, drop out of school each year for economic reasons, because classroom work has become meaningless or because of home problems. These young people, between the ages of 16 and 22, begin to drift into a lifetime of unemployment, underemployment and frustration.

Thus, begins the American poverty cycle: an on-going system that makes it so difficult for people to break out.

And though federally-funded programs once were instrumental in reviving hope in the hearts of young poverty-stricken people thoughout America, budget cutbacks in social programs aimed at addressing many of the important needs of these youth now forces private enterprise to consider youth motivational programs that are designed to avoid the summer idleness and despair that often leads to high crime rates and increased street gang activity.

This year, approximately four million youth between the ages of 16 and 22 will join the unemployment rolls. According to published government statistics, nearly 50 percent of these youth will be Black and will have little or not chance of finding a decent foothold in the American economic system.

Karen's News Syndicate, a Black-oriented news agency, along with this newspaper and other like-minded national corporations and educational institutions, will host an editorial essay con test for minority youth in the United States during the 1984 Summer Olympia Games.

The contest is seen as a method of stimulating disadvantaged minority youth and to inspire them to get busy planning and working for a profitable future in the journalism and public relations career fields.

Today's youth have an outstanding awareness of the problems the beset inner cities. Many of them are articulate and need only to have an opportunity to express themselves. And, at a time when the communication gap between various youth and adult segments of the community has widened to the point where many of today's youth listen primarily to the voices of other youth, it is felt that the editorial essay contest will serve to broaden that youth voice.

The contest, which starts July 20 and runs through August 20, 1984, will seek to learn "How Today's Youth Can Make A Better World" and will be open to young people from the age of 12 to 19. Prizes of computers, electric typewriters and other tools used by writers are being donated by several major corporations and winners will be judged in three age categories. The essays should be typed or printed for legibility and will be judged on the basis of organization, grammar, content, neatness, spelling and punctuation. Essays should be aproximately 1,000 words.

For information, write to Elaine Parker Gills, Essay Contest Director, W.E.B. Dubois Academic Institute, 2620 West 54th Street, Los Angeles, CA 90043. Or, call (213) 292-2051.

The Klan Exposed

The Ku Klux Klan, one of America's oldest organized hate groups, became the chief instrument of southern underground resistance to democracy following the Civil War. Since that time, the KKK has tortured the nation with a century-long reign of terror and racism.

Despite numerous attempts to rid the country of this evil nuisance, the Klan prevails.

One successful attempt, however, at harnessing Klan strength did come about in 1941 when a White Florida-born investigative reporter named Stetson Kennedy infiltrated the organization. Kennedy provided authorities with valuable information on its terrorist activities and his findings were published in newspapers and magazines. He has also written a half-dozen books on the subject of human rights.

Stetson Kennedy's first encounter with the Klan came shortly after the beginning of World War II. President Roosevelt had just imposed an enormous tax lien on the Klan's Imperial Palace in Atlanta. After hearing about it, Kennedy made arrangements to meet wth the Imperial Wizard.

"I made a date with the Wizard and had a long talk with him, which I noted and published. And he was very sad about the whole thing, he said, "What can you do, $635,000?" and, he said, "I just packed up, boarded up the palace and came."

"So FDR put the Klan out of business for the duration of World War II with that simple, effective device. And when the war was over, a doctor in Atlanta, Samuel Green, decided that he was going to revive the Klan to deal with post-war problems, such as Blacks not wanting to pick cotton anymore and ideas about integration that they picked up overseas.

It was his Klan in which I infiltrated, the Atlanta Klavern Number One, the headquarters Klan, "Kennedy told me in a television interview."

Kennedy's courageousness also put him in a position to ever-present danger. For the 12 years that he infiltrated the Klan, he was constantly aware of an oath that meant death if he were caught.

"Anyone who infiltrates the Klan and reveals any of its secrets or activities is taking their life into their hands," he explains.

"The oath of the Klan membership, in fact, stipulates that you will willingly accept death---death at the hands of a brother, if you reveal any of the secrets. The Grand Dragon, when all this exposing was going on, I worked under the name of John S. Perkins inslide the Klan. And what stuff I published is done through people like Drew Pearson and Superman. But, in any case, the Dragon said that when they caught the bastard, he would kneel him before the altar and personally wear off both arms up to the elbows.

Violence has been the essence of the Klan almost from the beginning. In December of 1865, six confederate veterans met in Pulaski, Tennessee and the KKK was born.

The reek word "Kukloi," which means circles, was suggested as a name. organized originally as a social club, the members dressed in robes and sheets designed to frighten superstitious neighbors. Therefore, the ghost charade was most effective on that group.

Blacks have been the chief target of Klan terrorism throughout its history, especially during the early days of the civil rights movement.

Stetson Kennedy's most impactful investigation as a Klan infiltrator came when he was sent by a national magazine to report on the gruesome murder of two prominent Florida NAACP officials.

Aided by his Klan infiltration capability, Kennedy's findings concerning the 1951 murder bombing of Harry and Harriett Moore in their home on Christmas Eve turned up a series of revealing facts about the still unsolved murders After a thorough FBI investigation in which a man allegedly confessed to the murders, no one was ever convicted of the crime.

" I applied under the Freedom of Information Act to the FBI for the release of the confession tapes. The FBI replied after a long delay that they did not think there was sufficient public interest for the murder of the Moores to qualify under the Freedom of Information Act. I appealed the FBI's decision to the Justice Department.

"And after another very long delay, had a final word that the appeal had been denied on the grounds that to even admit there was any such tape would compromise the the privacy of the assasin. Of course, that means they're weighing the privacy of this White, confessed terrorist bomber against the death of this Black couple. And really against, they're weighing it against the American people," Kennedy explains.
